

volume sixteen

Justice Framed:
Law in Comics and Graphic Novels

edited by

Luis Gómez Romero and Ian Dahlman

This issue may be cited as
(2012) 16 LTC

It should be catalogued as Law Text Culture with no punctuation.

ISSN 1332-9060

© Law Text Culture and contributors

Front cover image: Enrique Torralba, www.enriquetorralba.com

Copy editor: Jenn Phillips

Printed by Print & Distribution Services University of Wollongong

Law Text Culture is an interdisciplinary peer reviewed journal published by the Legal Intersections Research Centre at the University of Wollongong in Australia.

Law Text Culture aims to produce fresh insights and knowledges along three axes of inquiry:

Politics: engaging the relationship of force and resistance;

Aesthetics: eliciting the relationship of judgment and expression;

Ethics: exploring the relationship of self and other.

For information on submission of manuscripts, calls for papers and proposals for special editions, including style guide, go to: www.uow.edu.au/law/LIRC/LTC

In Australia and Europe, subscription enquiries should be directed to major distributors or to Law Text Culture through the website given above.

In North America, subscription enquiries should be directed to:

Gaunt Inc., Gaunt Building
3011 Gulf Drive
Holmes Beach
Florida 34217-2199 USA

info@gaunt.com

All back issues of Law Text Culture from volume 1 (1994) to date are now available in pdf online at <http://ro.uow.edu.au/ltc>

Contents

- 3 Justice Framed: Law in Comics and Graphic Novels

Comics as Theory

- 33 Krazy Kat (review)
- 35 The Legal Surrealism of George Herriman's Krazy Kat
- 65 'What had been many became one': Continuity, the common law, and Crisis on Infinite Earths
- 93 Justice in the Gutter: Representing Everyday Trauma in the Graphic Novels of Art Spiegelman
- 119 'Sakaarson the World Breaker': Violence and différance in the political and legal theory of Marvel's sovereign
- 155 Chewing in the Name of Justice: The Taste of Law in Action

Comics as Legal Ideologies

- 183 Magic and Modernity in Tintin au Congo (1930) and the Sierra Leone Special Court
- 217 Spider-Man, The Question and the Meta-Zone: Exception, Objectivism and the Comics of Steve Ditko
- 243 Comic Book Mythology: Shyamalan's Unbreakable and the Grounding of Good in Evil

- 277 'Come a Day there Won't be Room for Naughty Men Like Us to Slip About at All': the Multi-Media Outlaws of Serenity and the Possibilities of Post-Literate Justice
- 305 The Aesthetics of Supervillainy
- 329 The Punisher and the Politics of Retributive Justice
- 353 'Riddle me this...?' Would the world need superheroes if the law could actually deliver 'justice'?

Comics as Legal Critique

- 379 Noir justice: Law, crime and morality in Díaz Canales and Guarnido's Blacksad: Somewhere within the shadows and Arctic-nation
- 411 The Story of Bohemia or, Why There Is Nothing to Rebel Against Anymore

Acknowledgements

Anyone who has enjoyed the experience (largely gratifying but also, at certain moments, downright exhausting) of participating in an editorial project knows that the final product reflects not only the work of those who are credited in it, but also a crowd of invisible contributions that aided its coming into the world. We would like to express our deepest gratitude to Enrique Torralba, who generously designed the cover of this volume. We would also like to thank the Law Students' Association and the Faculty of Law's Dean at McGill University, who each provided us with funds for the copyright clearances for many images reproduced in the following pages, as well as the prize money for the creative submission contest that resulted in the inclusion of John Hanamy's work. Ana Merino, Desmond Manderson and Julia Quilter also graciously volunteered their time as jurors for the contest - thank you for your time and judicious acumen.

Several comics publishers and artists allowed us to gratuitously reproduce most of the comics excerpts that have been included in this volume. We would therefore like to thank DC Comics, John Layman and Rob Guillory, L'Association, Marjane Satrapi, Marvel, Moulinsart, Norma Editorial, and Andrés Rabago García ('El Roto'), for making Justice Framed, and the free circulation of ideas through comics, possible.

Finally, we both would like to thank our families for their unerring support. Justice Framed is infinitely better for their patience and encouragement.

Luis Gómez Romero and Ian Dahlman,
December 2012

Contributors

Benjamin Authers

Benjamin Authers is an Australian Research Council Laureate Postdoctoral Fellow at the Australian National University. His research examines the interrelations between law and literature, ranging from ideas of responsibility, law enforcement, and nation-building in nineteenth century Canada to the legal and cultural work of rights in Canadian and international contexts. Benjamin's work has been published in the University of Toronto Quarterly, Orlando: Women's Writing in the British Isles from the Beginnings to the Present, and the Journal of the Association for the Study of Australian Literature.

Jason Bainbridge

Dr Jason Bainbridge is Associate Professor in Media Studies at Swinburne University of Technology. He has published widely on law and popular culture, differences between ideas of heroism in the Marvel and DC universes, material culture and social media. He is co-author of Media and Journalism: New Approaches to Theory and Practice (2011, OUP) and is a regular contributor to ABC radio. He is a fan of all of Steve Ditko's work... apart from Speedball, Squirrel Girl and that Gobots colouring book in the eighties.

Karen Crawley

Karen Crawley holds a Bachelor of Arts/Bachelor of Laws from the University of Sydney, Australia, with First Class Honours in English Literature and in Law. She completed her masters and doctorate at the Faculty of Law at McGill University, where her research was supported by the Canada Research Chair in Law and Discourse. Her doctorate, 'Seeing Double: Ironic Encounters between Law and Art,' examines the intersection between law and culture through the notion of irony, working through a series of case studies in the regulation of literature, theatre, photography and street art. Her research draws on literary theory, semiotics, aesthetic criminology, visual studies, and critical theory, in order to contribute to the field of cultural legal studies. Karen currently teaches Jurisprudence and Contracts at the Griffith Law School.

Ian Dahlman

Ian Dahlman is a B.C.L. / LL.B candidate at McGill University. He holds an MA in Communication and Culture from Ryerson University and York University, with a major in Media and Culture and a minor in Politics and Policy.

Jack Fennell

Jack Fennell is a postgraduate researcher at the University of Limerick, Ireland. His research interests include science fiction, utopian literature, Anglo-Irish literature and cultural studies.

John Hanamy

Born in Limerick, Ireland. Currently teaches anatomy in Pearse College in Dublin. Doodles as a hobby and is attempting to explain the most complex questions in the form of cartoons. 'If you can follow it, you can understand it.' Holds a BA in Theology and Philosophy and is doing a Masters in Modern History. Delighted to have made a contribution to Law Text Culture.

Jane Hanley

Jane Hanley lectures in Spanish and Latin American Studies within the Department of International Studies at Macquarie University. Her research centres around transnational connections in Mexican and Spanish popular culture, with a particular emphasis on the representation of power and inequality. Her recent publications concentrate on contemporary reimaginings of Spain's history of violence at home and abroad. She is currently working on a monograph on twentieth century travel writing about Mexico.

Anita Lam

Anita Lam is an Assistant Professor of Criminology at York University. Her previous research examined the production of representations of crime and policing in North American television crime dramas. She is currently under contract to turn this research into a monograph for publication with Routledge. Her work can also be found in the following edited anthologies: Law and Justice on the Small Screen (2012) and Perspectives on Legal Communication: Transparency, Power and Control (2012).

Chris Lloyd

Chris Lloyd holds an LLB (Hons) from Kent Law School and is a doctoral candidate within the School of Law, Birkbeck College, University of London. He has taught at Birkbeck College, Durham University and is currently a Lecturer in Law at Oxford Brookes University. His research interests include the jurisprudence and theory of Jacques Derrida (and deconstruction generally), the relationship between law and immunity, and critical conceptions of criminal law. Chris also has forthcoming work in the Australian Feminist Law Journal.

Timothy Peters

Timothy D Peters holds an LLB and a Bachelor of Commerce from Griffith University. After working in Banking & Finance for a number of years, he is now a Lecturer at the Griffith Law School, Griffith University, Queensland, Australia. His research focuses on the intersections of legal theory, theology and popular culture and he is currently completing a PhD involving readings of a number of films including the Star Wars trilogies, I, Robot, Ghost Rider and Christopher Nolan's The Dark Knight trilogy. Tim is also co-managing editor of the Griffith Law Review and secretary of both the Law, Literature and Humanities Association of Australasia and the Law and Society Association of Australia and New Zealand.

René Provost

René Provost holds a Bachelor of Laws from the Université de Montréal, a Master of Laws from the University of California at Berkeley, and a D.Phil. from the University of Oxford. He served as law clerk to the Honourable Justice Claire L'Heureux-Dubé at the Supreme Court of Canada in 1988-1989, and taught international law at Lehigh University in Pennsylvania in 1991. He joined the Faculty of Law of McGill University in 1994, serving as Associate Dean (Academic) from 2001 to 2003. From 2005 to 2010 he was the founding Director of the McGill Centre for Human Rights and Legal Pluralism. He is the author of International Human Rights and Humanitarian Law (Cambridge University Press, 2002), the editor of State Responsibility in International Law (Ashgate-Dartmouth, 2002), and co-editor of International Law Chiefly as Applied and Interpreted in Canada, 6th Ed. (Emond Montgomery, 2006), Confronting Genocide (Springer Verlag, 2011), and Dialogues on Human Rights and Legal Pluralism (Springer Verlag, 2012). He is the principal investigator of the Centaur Jurisprudence Project, an interdisciplinary and interuniversity team exploring the construction of culture by legal institutions and processes funded by the Canadian Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council.

Honni van Rijswijk

Dr Honni van Rijswijk is a Senior Lecturer at UTS Law School, and co-convenor of the Law and Culture Group at UTS Law. She has published in the areas of law and culture, legal history, and indigenous rights. She was educated in Australia, Ireland and the USA, and teaches in the areas of torts, international commercial law, and law and culture.

Luis Gómez Romero

Luis Gómez Romero has recently finished a postdoctoral fellowship at the Institute for the Public Life of Arts and Ideas (IPLAI) at McGill University (2011-2012). As a resident at IPLAI, he developed a project that delved into the narrative life of basic civil liberties and political rights in popular culture, exploring at the same time how, why and to what extent different media (comics, films and video games) diverge on their depictions of the function such liberties and rights play in society, either facilitating or hampering their discursive effectiveness. This project was funded by the Spanish Ministry of Education (Programa Nacional de Movilidad de Recursos Humanos del Plan Nacional de I-D+i 2008-2011). In 2009, Luis finished his Ph.D. in jurisprudence at the Universidad Carlos III de Madrid with a dissertation titled "Fantasia, Distopía y Justicia: La Saga de Harry Potter como Instrumento para la Enseñanza de los Derechos Humanos" ("Fantasy, Dystopia, and Justice: Harry Potter's Saga as an Instrument for Teaching Human Rights").

Cassandra Sharp

Cassandra Sharp is Senior Lecturer in the Faculty of Law at the University of Wollongong. She has a combined Bachelor of Arts (English Literature)/Bachelor of Laws(Hons) and a PhD from the University of Wollongong. Cassandra's primary research interest lies within the field of law and popular culture. In particular, she has empirically explored the transformative process of first year law; the use of popular stories by students in constructing identity; and the way in which understandings of ethics are challenged or maintained through popular stories of law. Cassandra's ongoing projects include exploring media reporting of sentencing, and the use of popular culture in public constructions of retributive justice.

Kieran Tranter

Kieran Tranter, Senior Lecturer, Griffith Law School, researches the cultural intersections of law and technology. Kieran has written widely on law and science fiction and the cultural legalities of popular television including Star Trek, Battlestar Galactica, Doctor Who and Top Gear. Between a project on law reform commissions and an interest in automobility, Kieran is currently exploring the consequences of digitality for what was known as the human.

Kent Worcester

Kent Worcester is a professor of political science at Marymount Manhattan College, where he teaches courses on ancient and modern political theory, contemporary warfare, democratic theory, and comics. He is the author or coeditor of seven books, including, most recently, 'Arguing Comics: Literary Masters on a Popular Medium' (2004, coedited with Jeet Heer), 'A Comics Studies Reader' (2009, coedited with Jeet Heer), and 'The Superhero Reader' (2013, coedited with Charles Hatfield and Jeet Heer).

Special Editors

Luis Gómez Romero, McGill University, Canada

Ian Dahlman, McGill University, Canada

Managing Editors

Luke McNamara, University of Wollongong, Australia

Julia Quilter, University of Wollongong, Australia

Editorial board

Massimo Leone, University of Torino, Italy

Desmond Manderson, Australian National University, Australia

Luke McNamara, University of Wollongong, Australia

Shaun McVeigh, University of Melbourne, Australia

Richard Mohr, Social Research, Policy & Planning Pty Ltd, Australia

Juliet Rogers, University of Melbourne, Australia

Nan Seuffert, University of Wollongong, Australia

Mariana Valverde, University of Toronto, Canada

Terry Threadgold, Cardiff University, Wales